Case No. CV 09-0037-CW

JOINT STATEMENT OF DISCOVERY DISPUTE OVER
 PLAINTIFFS' REQUESTS FOR PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS

1 Pursuant to Judge Corley's Standing Order, and as contemplated by the parties' June 20, 2 2011 Stipulation (Docket No. 237), the parties submit this Joint Statement to advise the Court of 3 their impasse concerning the responses and objections of Defendants Department of Defense
4 ("DoD") and Central Intelligence Agency ("CIA") to Plaintiffs' document requests. The parties
5 have attempted to resolve their disputes via letter and by telephone on May 23, 2011 and May 26, 6 2011. Despite these good faith efforts to resolve their disputes, both sides agree that the issues

8 INTRODUCTION

9 Plaintiffs' Statement. Defendants have vehemently resisted Plaintiffs' discovery requests 10 throughout this litigation, erroneously claiming that Plaintiffs' claims arise solely under the APA.
11 The parties engaged in extensive motion practice last year, resolved by Judge Larson's November 12 12, 2010 Order (Docket No. 178). The Court gave both sides a final opportunity to resolve their 13 document production disputes. Plaintiffs significantly narrowed the scope of their requests in 14 compliance with the Court's Order. For the purposes of discovery, Plaintiffs provided 15 Defendants a list of test substances narrowed from over 400 substances, which are still at issue in 16 the case, to only 63 substances. This significantly lessened Defendants' discovery burden. Half a 17 year has passed since the November 2010 Order, yet Defendants still have not complied with 18 their discovery obligations. The primary disagreement underlying the parties' disputes concerns 19 the scope of relevant issues in this case. Defendants consistently attempt to constrict improperly 20 the relevant universe, and Court intervention is necessary to resolve this fundamental issue.

21 Defendants' Statement. Defendants have fully complied with the Court's November 10, 22 2010 order and have produced over one million pages of documents at enormous time and 23 expense, notwithstanding the fact that Plaintiffs' claims are made pursuant to the Administrative 24 Procedure Act ("APA"). Accordingly, discovery is not appropriate in this case whether under

26 <sup>1</sup> The parties are in the process of attempting to resolve a few additional discovery 27 disputes. These disputes are not addressed in this Joint Statement because the parties hope to 28 resolve them without intervention. The parties also will submit separate joint statements regarding Plaintiffs' discovery requests to the Defendant Department of Veterans Affairs.

1 706(1) or 706(2). (See Dkt. 214 at 2–4). Plaintiffs have refused to narrow the definition of “test 2 programs” and “reevaluate what information is central to their case, recognize the limits on the 3 usefulness of some of the information they seek, and make a sincere effort to reduce the scope of 4 discovery,” as ordered by Magistrate Judge Larson. (Dkt. 178 at 7.) Indeed, Plaintiffs 5 themselves recognize the substantial burden associated with their requests, as they have declined 6 an invitation to inspect and copy thousands of documents on the basis of burden. Finally, 7 Plaintiffs refuse to acknowledge that they have no viable claims against the CIA.

8 TIME LIMITATIONS

9 Plaintiffs’ Statement. Plaintiffs seek information regarding the entire timeframe of the 10 Testing Programs, which began in 1942. (See, e.g., 3rd Am. Compl. ¶¶ 2, 103-105.) While 11 Defendants assert that they have not completely excluded documents predating 1953, Defendants 12 have claimed that information from before 1953 is irrelevant and have refused to specifically 13 search for responsive documents from that time. They also have refused to specifically search for 14 documents related to Mustard Gas and Lewisite testing during the 1940s. There is no basis for 15 Defendants’ refusal to search for this clearly relevant information.

16 Defendants’ Statement. The District Court has expressly concluded that the jurisdictional 17 bases for Plaintiffs’ APA claim rested upon the Wilson Directive (1953), CS: 385 (1953); and 18 Army Regulation 70-25 (1962). (Dkt. 59 at 2.) Nonetheless, DoD has conducted searches that 19 pre-date 1953, including for documents concerning chemical and biological substances and its 20 contract deliverables from Battelle. In addition, the Chem-Bio database includes some 21 individuals from the 1940s. However, DoD has not specifically searched for documents related 22 to the full-body Mustard Gas and Lewisite tests conducted in the 1940s, as the burden of 23 undertaking a search effort for documents greatly outweighs its relevance, in any. This is 24 particularly true given that none of the named individual plaintiffs have standing to pursue such 25 claims, as they were all test participants in the late 1960s and were not subject to Mustard Gas or 26 Lewisite exposure. With regard to the CIA, it searched for information from the inception of the 27 CIA in 1947 and plainly cannot be expected to search beyond that.

BATTELLE MEMORIAL INSTITUTE

2 Plaintiffs' Statement. Defendants have failed to produce a wide range of documents
3 concerning Battelle Memorial Institute's ("Battelle") work on (1) Defendants' "Chem-Bio 4 database" and (2) gathering documentation of tests. Although Defendants agreed to provide all 5 "contract deliverables," they have refused to search for and produce email and other 6 communications with Battelle concerning the scope, modification, and execution of the 7 contract — i.e., the Chem-Bio Database and document collection project. Defendants also have 8 failed to produce Battelle contract documents, including the contract, amendments, and contract 9 correspondence; standard operating procedures; quality control measures such as the technical 10 operating manual; interim and final reports; and narrative reports. This information is relevant to 11 Plaintiffs' notice and healthcare claims and is critical to Plaintiffs' ability to assess the veracity of 12 the database and the propriety of the document collection efforts. Moreover, Defendants have 13 steadfastly sought to obstruct Plaintiffs' efforts to obtain relevant information from Battelle
14 through a third-party subpoena (an issue now being considered by a magistrate judge in Ohio).

15 Defendants' Statement. The "veracity" of the information contained in the database and 16 the "propriety of the document collection effort" are not issues in this action under Section 702(1)
17 of the APA. Plaintiffs have failed to explain why the documents DoD already has produced 18 related to Battelle's search efforts – including the locations searched and the status of those search 19 efforts – as well as the documents collected by Battelle at those numerous locations and produced 20 to Plaintiffs, are insufficient to meet their needs. Defendants' disagree with Plaintiffs' 21 characterization that DoD has somehow "obstructed" Plaintiffs' efforts to obtain this information.
22 In fact, Battelle has indicated that it will produce a substantial number of documents to Plaintiffs.

HEALTH EFFECTS

24 Plaintiffs' Statement. Defendant CIA has refused to search for and produce documents
25 reflecting possible health effects of test substances other than only two chemical agents. The CIA
26 has taken the preposterous position that the Court dismissed constitutional claims that Defendants
27 never moved to dismiss. Relying on this argument, the CIA improperly frames its unfulfilled 28 document production obligations as third-party discovery with a heightened burden.

1 This argument rests on a serious miscasting of Plaintiffs' notice and health care claims as 2 solely arising under the APA. In every version of the Complaint from the beginning, however,
3 Plaintiffs also have asserted Defendants' violation of Plaintiffs' constitutional due process rights
4 as a basis for seeking notice and health care from Defendants. (See Docket No. 180 at ¶¶ 186, 5 189.) Defendants never have moved to dismiss these constitutional claims, nor even discussed
6 them in their two motions to dismiss. (See Docket Nos. 57, 187.) The Court also recognized 7 these constitutional claims (see, e.g., Docket No. 59 at 4-5) and never dismissed them in its 8 previous orders (id. and Docket No. 233). Thus, discovery of the CIA relevant to those claims is 9 entirely proper. In addition, the CIA's "administrative record" does not relieve the CIA of its 10 discovery obligations. Discovery concerning possible health effects of substances used in the test 11 programs also is relevant to Plaintiffs' claims against the DOD/Army.

12 Defendants' Statement. Plaintiffs' assertion that they have remaining notice and health 13 care claims based on the Constitution is frivolous and squarely contradicted by Plaintiffs' 14 repeated representations that they were not alleging a constitutional claim for notice and medical 15 care. (See, e.g., Dkt. 43 at 24; Pls.' Am. & Supp. Resps. to Defs.' Interrogs. Nos. 2, 6, 8.) Also, 16 Defendants' partial motion to dismiss was predicated on Plaintiffs' failure to identify any 17 enforceable basis for these two claims, (Dkt. 187 at 1, 17), and the Court agreed and dismissed
18 the claims in their entirety. (Dkt. 233 at 5-6, 11.). If the Court believes discovery is warranted
19 on Plaintiffs' remaining notice and healthcare claims against the CIA, Defendants respectfully 20 request that the Court refer the issue of the remaining claims to the District Court for resolution.

21 Additionally, the CIA produced all information related to the only two substances it 22 contemplated testing on volunteer service members and provided Plaintiffs with 20,000 pages of 23 additional documents concerning its unrelated historical testing programs (including health 24 effects information). To require the CIA to search beyond this would be unduly burdensome, 25 particularly since Plaintiffs' document requests do not define "health effects" and given that the 26 CIA is an intelligence agency and not one involved in health matters. This information is also 27 irrelevant in an APA case, see Asarco, Inc. v. EPA, 616 F.2d 1153 (9th Cir. 1980), and a Rule 28 23(b)(2) class action. See Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Dukes, _ S. Ct. ___, 2011 WL 2437013 (2011).

DRUGS AND SUBSTANCES OBTAINED BY CIA

2 Plaintiffs' Statement. Plaintiffs have requested documents concerning “the drugs and 3 substances the CIA obtained from drug and pharmaceutical companies, other government
4 agencies, including the VA, NIH, FDA, and EARL . . .” Given Plaintiffs’ remaining claims 5 against the CIA, the CIA cannot avoid its obligations regarding this request. DVA’s prior 6 involvement in testing lies at the core of Plaintiffs’ bias claim against the DVA. The DOD has 7 limited its searches on this issue, claiming that it is unlikely it has responsive documents. Given 8 the CIA’s acknowledged document destruction and the clear connection between the CIA and the 9 DOD’s test programs, DOD should conduct a comprehensive search for responsive documents.
10 Plaintiffs have not refused to inspect relevant documents; Defendants have provided only a vague 11 index of potentially responsive documents rather than producing the documents themselves.

12 Defendants' Statement. For the reasons discussed above, Plaintiffs do not have any viable 13 claims against the CIA, and in any event, the CIA produced all non-privileged records that would 14 be responsive to this request. Also, Plaintiffs’ sole claim against the VA is a facial bias claim, 15 under which the relevant inquiry is whether it makes “neutral, unbiased benefits determinations 16 for veterans who were test participants.” (Dkt. 177 at 11.) This inquiry must focus on the present
17 state of VA’s decision-making process, not forty-year old records about the provision of drug 18 samples to the CIA. This request would also be unduly burdensome, and Plaintiffs’ assertion that 19 the CIA’s 1973 document destruction has any bearing on this request is incorrect. Finally, DoD
20 has conducted reasonable searches for all the substances identified in Plaintiffs’ “narrowed” list 21 of chemical and biological agents, and Plaintiffs have refused invitations to inspect the results.

CONCLUSION

23 Plaintiffs' Statement. Plaintiffs respectfully request an order compelling Defendants to 24 search for and produce the above information. Alternatively, Plaintiffs request the opportunity to 25 offer formal briefing on these issues, should the Court deem it prudent.
26
28

1            Defendants' Statement. Defendants respectfully request that the Court deny Plaintiffs'
2 requested order. Alternatively, Defendants request that they be allowed to offer formal briefing 3 and declarations regarding these issues, as well as a renewed motion for a protective order.
